On Monday, August 6, 2018, New Albany resident Matt Brewer lost his life due to injuries sustained when he was struck by a minivan while skateboarding home from the New Albany Riverfront skatepark. Matt was an admired and well-respected skateboarder in our community. He had a positive influence on the lives of many people growing up in New Albany. His loss will be felt by many, and the community has expressed a tremendous outpouring of support for his family.

Not only was Matt Brewer an avid skater and beloved member of the community, he was also champion of the development of the Flow Park project. Because of his enthusiasm, the Carnegie Center for Art and History would like to acknowledge our support for memorializing Matt at the skatepark.

"With this whole initiative with art and adding objects...putting things here and there and color, it'll be nice. It's been something I've been looking forward to for years."—Matt Brewer, in an interview with the News and Tribune commenting on the Flow Park project, April 29, 2017.
